Boston

“Boston’s history started thousands of years before any settlers arrived, with the Native Americans who lived off the land at least 12,000 years ago. These people all belonged to Algonquian tribes, meaning they spoke Algonquian languages, a set of the most prolifically used language groups of North American Native Americans. They often lived in wigwams or longhouses, and many tribes were fairly nomadic. A few of the more populous tribes of the Greater Boston Area were the Massachusetts, the Pawtucket, and the Pokantoket.” - Native American Names in the Greater Boston Area – Literature and Digital Diversity (northeastern.edu)

Gresham, OR

“The Native American peoples of Oregon are the set of Indigenous peoples who have inhabited or who still inhabit the area delineated in today’s state of Oregon in the Pacific Northwest region of the United States. While the state of Oregon currently maintains relations with nine federally recognized tribal groups, the state was previously home to a much larger number of autonomous tribal groups, which today either no longer exist or have been absorbed into these larger confederated entities. Six of the nine tribes gained federal recognition in the late 20th century, after undergoing the termination and restoration of their treaty rights starting in the 1950s.” - Native American peoples of Oregon - Wikipedia

Klamath Basin

“The six bands of the Klamath were bound together by ties of loyalty and family. They lived along the Klamath Marsh, on the banks of Klamath Lake, near the mouth of the Lower Williamson River, Pelican Bay, beside the Link River, and in the uplands of the Sprague River Valley. The Modocs’ lands included the Link River, Lower Lost River, Clear Lake, the Lava Beds, and the territory that extended south as far as the mountains beyond Goose Lake and Mount Shasta. The Yahooskin-Paiute Bands occupied the area east of Yamsay Mountain, south of Lakeview, and north of Fort Rock. Today, we are one of nine sovereign tribal nations in the state of Oregon. The mission of the Klamath Tribes is to protect, preserve and enhance the spiritual, cultural, and physical values and resources of the Klamath, Modoc, and Yahooskin-Paiute peoples by maintaining the customs and heritage of our ancestors. We are taught, “naanok ?ans naat sat’waYa naat ciwapk diceew’a”: We help each other; We will live well.” - History – The Klamath Tribes

“The Kalapuyans are a Native American ethnic group. Many of their contemporary descendants are members of the Confederated Tribes of the Grand Ronde Community of Oregon. The Kalapuyan traditional homelands were in the Willamette, Elk Creek, and Calapooya Creek watersheds of Western Oregon. They hunted and gathered as far east and west as the Cascades and Coast ranges and traded with the Chinookans to the north and Coos peoples on the coast. Their major tribes were the Tualatin, Yamhill, and Ahantchuyuk at the north, the Santiam, Luckamiute, Tekopa, Chenapinefu in the central valley and the Chemapho, Chelamela, Chafin, Peyu (Mohawk), and Winefelly in the southern Willamette Valley. “ - Kalapuya: Native Americans of the Willamette Valley, Oregon - LCC Research Guides at Lane Community College (lanecc.edu)
